

MOONSHINE CLASS

Moonshine is an unaged, single distilled product of the fermentation of sugar, corn, and water. It is a neutral spirit, easily taking on the characteristics of whatever it is infused or flavored with. It is a true, raw, American product that is immensely versatile. Moonshine is referred to by several different names: White Lightning or White Whiskey

THE PROCESS

Make a mash using corn and sugar. The milled corn, water and sugar are mixed together at a high temperature. Ferment the mash by adding yeast. The yeast helps convert the sugars into CO<sub>2</sub> and ethanol. Distill the fermented wash. Ethanol boils at a lower temperature (172 degrees) than water (212 degrees) and therefore can be separated. The wash is heated up in a still till the Ethanol starts to boil and turns into a vapor, separating from the wash water. The vapor is then condensed (turned back into a liquid) and drips out of the still into a mason jar.

Moonshine is also known as white lightning, hooch, shine, and many other names. It has a deep and rich history, initially being made in the dark of night (hence moonshine), during prohibition. Today, it is widely produced and distributed, legally.

We serve numerous brands and infuse our own! Any of the moonshine we serve can be ordered alone (served on the rocks, unless otherwise requested), with a mixer (apple pie and root beer, peach and ginger ale, the list goes on!), as a flight (4 served in shot glassed), or in few of our handcrafted craft cocktails: Pineapple bomb, trapdoor sangria, and knockout punch.
